

ABSTRACT OF DISCLOSURE

A service providing method and system according to which a stable access condition is maintained, losses of service providing opportunities to users are reduced and a stable service is provided via a network are provided. When an access request is sent from a user to a service providing server and an accessible number is exceeded, the server indicates information of the number of accesses to a user without immediately executing the access to said server, updates the information periodically and connects the user with the server when the server becomes accessible.